

How can we improve estimates of indirect aerosol forcing?

Joyce E. Penner and Cheng Zhou

In the past, estimates of the aerosol indirect effect have used both models and satellite observations, each with their separate difficulties. Here, we will review what has been done to examine aerosol indirect effects using both satellite data analysis and model results. We propose new methods for combining observations with model results in order to better estimate aerosol indirect effects.